

Vietnamese Studies

44th year

N°3-2008 (169)

Index 12,192

Dossier: Long-term effects of Agent Orange used by the US in Vietnam

I. Scientific data

Effects of toxic chemicals on the forest ecosystem during the Vietnam War: a serious environmental challenge to Vietnam's sustainable development - Harmful effects of Agent Orange/dioxin on the health of dioxin-exposed Vietnamese - Considerations made by scientists regarding the consequences of chemical warfare in Vietnam - Agent Orange/dioxin and its consequences on human health through epidemiological survey: retrospective study, evaluation, and analysis - Study of the frequency of nasopharyngeal cancer in dioxin-exposed patients in comparison with unexposed patients at Central Military Hospital 108 - Long-term consequences of toxic chemicals on human health

II. Law and ethics

Fight for justice by Agent Orange/dioxin victims continues fiercely - Some remarks on the consequences of Agent Orange/dioxin from the Vietnam War: past, present and future - Dioxin victims' fight for justice in the US - The right to a decent life

III. Appendix

Letter to the International Conference on the Consequences of Agent Orange - The call of the international conference for Agent Orange/dioxin victims - Prof. Dr. Hoang Dinh Cau, with all his heart, to the victims of chemical warfare - Prof. Le Cao Dai, a soldier-doctor, and his study of consequences of chemical warfare on human health - Approaching dioxin victims

VIETNAMESE STUDIES

Review founded in 1964

by Nguyễn Khắc Viện

Chairman of the Advisory Board: Hữu Ngọc

Editor-in-chief: Trần Đoàn Lâm

Editorial Office:

46 Trần Hưng Đạo Str., Hà Nội, Việt Nam.

Distributor:

- Xunhasaba, 32 Hai Bà Trưng Str., Hà Nội, Việt Nam.

- Vietnamese Studies, 46 Trần Hưng Đạo Str., Hà Nội, Việt Nam.

Contents

Effects of toxic chemicals on the forest ecosystem during the Vietnam War: a serious environmental challenge to Vietnam's sustainable development 7

Vo Quy

Harmful effects of Agent Orange/dioxin on the health of dioxin-exposed Vietnamese 22

Bui Dai

Considerations made by scientists regarding the consequences of chemical warfare in Vietnam 30

Tran Xuan Thu

Agent Orange/dioxin and its consequences on human health through epidemiological survey: retrospective study, evaluation, and analysis 42

Le Thi Hong Thom

Study of the frequency of nasopharyngeal cancer in dioxin-exposed patients in comparison with unexposed patients at Central Military Hospital 108 54

Nguyen Quoc Gia

Long-term consequences of toxic chemicals on human health 64

Vu Hoai Tuan

Fight for justice by Agent Orange/dioxin victims continues fiercely	73
Luu Van Dat
Some remarks on the consequences of Agent Orange/dioxin from the Vietnam War: past, present and future	80
Nguyen Thi Ngoc Toan
Dioxin victims' fight for justice in the US	84
Le Duc Tiet
The right to a decent life	91
Mai The Chinh
Letter to the International Conference on the Consequences of Agent Orange	97
General Vo Nguyen Giap
The call of the international conference for Agent Orange/dioxin victims	100
Dang Vu Hiep
Prof. Dr. Hoang Dinh Cau, with all his heart, to the victims of chemical warfare	104
Le Thi Hong Thom
Prof. Le Cao Dai, a soldier-doctor, and his study of consequences of chemical warfare on human health	108
Le Thi Hong Thom
Approaching dioxin victims	112
Dam Thu	